The role

Bell describes the role as Manager, Strategy & Strategic Programs. Reporting to the Senior Manager, Strategy, the person helps plan and carry out priorities across the business, including executive Deep Dives, Gap Closure, idea development, capital portfolio planning and business cases. The work calls for strategic analysis, project management and communication with executives to turn complex issues into recommendations and practical action plans.

What you'll do

- Own and manage Deep Dive reports for the CEO and other executives. Gather input from multiple teams, analyze it, develop the executive narrative and turn complex findings into clear insights and recommendations.
- Oversee key parts of Gap Closure. Find, evaluate and prioritize ways to improve operating expenditure (OPEX), then move them from concept to business case, executive agreement and implementation planning.
- Partner with the Design Thinking lead to turn ideas and workshop results into actionable opportunities. Define who owns each opportunity, the next steps and its potential value.
- Find ways to improve OPEX. Shape workshops around business challenges and financial findings so ideas focus on areas with significant strategic and financial potential.
- Help develop and assess business cases. Consider the impacts on OPEX and CAPEX, expected benefits, investment needs, risks, dependencies and implementation.
- Work with Finance and other business units to keep financial assumptions, executive reports, business cases, capital recommendations and strategic priorities aligned.
- Create executive presentations and narratives that convey the strategy. Explain analyses and recommendations confidently to senior stakeholders.
- Coordinate complex work across functions before implementation, keeping teams aligned on deliverables, schedules, dependencies, risks, decisions and responsibilities.
- Build relationships across functions and business units, influence outcomes and adjust quickly as priorities change.
